Mediation and the Process of Transformation
A comprehensive, two-day professional development program
May 4–5, 2018 • 8:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m.
Program Focus: The focus of the program will be on the underlying premises, practices and policies of conflict transformation. This approach to changing the equality of human interaction is now adopted by the US Postal Service as well as other government and non-government agencies.

Program Format: The format of the program includes brief lectures, interactive group work and mediation role plays. Participants will reflect on their work and life experience to engage in the process of dispute resolution systems design with an emphasis on the nature of conflict, personal and organizational responses to conflict and case studies.

Mediation and the Process of Transformation

Will Galloway earned a Masters of Arts in Teaching from Colgate University, an Honors Degree in British History from the University of St. Andrews in Scotland and a B.A. in History from Bowdoin College. An instructor of UMaine's Peace & Reconciliation Studies Program, Galloway has taught mediation courses for over 14 years. Currently Galloway is the Head of School at the Watershed School in Camden, Maine.

Additionally, Galloway’s work experience includes Mediator & Managing Partner, Charbonneau and Galloway; Educational Consultant, Maine Department of Education; Teaching Fellow, Choices Program at Watson Institute for International Relations at Brown University; Waynflete School in Portland, Maine; Western Reserve Academy in Hudson, Ohio; U.S. Peace Corps in Thailand and Citicorp Investment Bank in London, England.

Register Online: hutchinsoncenter.umaine.edu/professional-development
Cost: $375  Need-based scholarships are available  Earn: 1.4 CEUs / 14 contact hours
For more information or to request a scholarship application contact Diana McSorley, diana.mcsorley@maine.edu, 338.8093

The University of Maine is an equal opportunity/affirmative action institution.